AUTOMOBILE SPEED RECORDS.

The following news item appeared in a contemporary yesterday:

"Manager Whitney made the trip between Enfield, N. H., and his home in Burlington in an automobile, carrying a party of five persons in seven hours, coming via Montpelier, and when the number of hills it is necessary to climb in making this trip are taken into consideration, it is evident that some of the road must have been covered at a high rate of speed in order to make this record possible. The trip was made in Mr. Whitney's Elmore touring car, which is of sixteen horse power, and he was well pleased with the working of the machine in every way."

We should think so. Moreover, we should think that Mr. Whitney would not be pleased to have his exploits of that nature set forth in the press. It is certainly "evident" that he did cover some stretches of road at a "high rate of speed." He must have done so to have made the distance from Enfield, N. H., to Burlington in seven hours. Yet there is a speed limit in the automobile law passed by the last legislature.

THE CITY COUNCIL DECIDES.

It is reasonable to assume that the city council, in its action last evening toward continuing the work of paving North Main street, has acted according to the city charter, for the lesson of the recent assessment case was probably strong enough to cause the board to act with circumspection. The city council, this time, according to the resolution adopted, "does hereby decide and adjudge that the public good and convenience and necessity of individuals demand" that the street be paved from the Miles granite block to Depot Square and including Depot Square. The street committee is not the deciding power under this resolution. It will be remembered that this was the point under which the technical quibble arose in the last assessment, the court finally holding that the action of assessment was not done according to the city charter, which states that the city council must decide that the public good, etc., requires the paving to be done. Two years ago the mistake was made of delegating the work to the street committee.

Regarding the decision to continue the paving, for a short distance at least, there cannot fail to be anything but satisfaction on the part of the general public. That portion of Main street, lying between the end of the present pavement and Depot Square has been a source of displeasure and annoyance for years. Although one of the most prominent sections of the business district, it has been allowed to remain as a disease-breeding bog in wet weather and an accumulation of overtopping rocks at all times, discouraging to traffic and travel. To the visitors to the city, coming from the depots to Main street, it furnishes a mistaken impression, making a decidedly poor advertisement. The paving of Depot Square is not a matter of so much consequence.

KANEKO ON THE WAR.

Its Future Effects Described by the Japanese Baron.

The Ethical Culture society in New York was addressed the other morning in Carnegie hall by Baron Kentaro Kaneko of Japan on the Russian-Japanese war, says the New York World. He declared that his country would occupy a greater position for having declared war against Russia, the nation which was looked upon by the world as the most powerful.

"No nation would declare war against Russia except tiny, little Japan," he said, "but we have been making preparations for it for ten years. We are not only fighting against the Russian army and navy, but are fighting a racial and religious war besides. Russia is performing the duty toward the white race by fighting us, the yellow peril, and is carrying on a crusade to crush the heathen Jap."

"To meet these attacks we appointed two professors on international law, it being our desire to conduct this war in accordance with the principles of Christian humanity against a pagan nation. I can stand here before this large audience in the greatest metropolis of the greatest nation and truthfully say that we have not violated one point in international law. We have supplied 3,500 doctors and nurses to the Red Cross in Japan, and we have cared for the wounded of our enemy as we have for our own."

"A special point in our military training is humanity. Bravery by mere force is animal brutality and not bravery. Our aim in life is to do right and no wrong to others. It is our hope to build up our nation by Anglo-Saxon civilization, individual right, religious freedom and political liberty."

"If we control the feeling of anger and severity against a bitter foe we are truly civilized people. Then—then only—can we say that man is made in the image of him whose name shall be glorified by man's action."

"The west is not only a factor destined to civilize the world. It discovered the real strength (moral and intellectual) of the Japanese. It has begun to respect the right of the Asiatics. The east has some power which can stand against the might of the west. The east, if it welcome western civilization, can be ranked with Europe and America."

"There will be two types of civilization—oriental and occidental—Japan and Europe and America. The three can be assimilated into one, by which oriental culture and western science shall not conflict, but be in harmony, so as to share the inheritance of the civilization of the two hemispheres."

ANOTHER BOMB FOUND.

One Spanish Anarchist Denounces a Compatriot.

Paris, June 2.—A member of the gang of Spanish anarchists arrested has denounced a compatriot named Mona as the author of the outrage on King Alfonso. The police possess a description of Mona and are pursuing inquiries regarding him.

Arsene Arnould is the name of one man arrested on suspicion of having attempted the assassination of King Alfonso. He is held on the evidence of a woman who alleges she noticed him lighting a supposed fuse.

Arnould is employed as a laboratory attendant and resides in Paris. He is suffering from a wounded eye.

Shortly after the passing of the Spanish king another bomb was found in the Rue Rivoli near the spot where the explosion occurred. It also contained dangerous explosives.

The wounded now reach 13. The police believe a band of Spanish anarchists arrested here May 26 were engaged in the plot. The authorities say the bomb was of Spanish manufacture.
